Wolverton Manor

1,000 years ago the manor was valued at 10 shillings (50p)! It has had many alterations over the years and so building styles representing the Tudor, Jacobean and Georgian eras can be seen. The old porch is from the original moated house. The roof is constructed of heavy Bembridge limestone tiles, which have caused the walls to bow. In the cellars is a very old corn mill that was used to grind flour.

Westcourt and Northcourt

Westcourt used to be called South Court, in Suthshorewelle.

Northcourt was called North-sorewelle in 1285.

Both are recorded in the Domesday Book. Northcourt mansion dates from 1615, and Westcourt is mostly Elizabethan.

These two manor houses are just off the cycle route, in Shorwell, and are well worth looking out for.
